Man after man, woman after woman, deavor to sell tickets, at twenty-five cents each, to help the Roman Catholic crochial school at St. Francis avenue.

The writer of this story is a newspaper man, and his business brought him into the tenderioin. He was walking along Sixth avenue, and as he neared Thirty-first street he noticed two little girls soliciting passersby. He ed to investigate and found the two little girls who gave their names Raphael Somma, eleven years old. and her sister, Mary Somma, nine years old, living with their parents at West Thirty-first street, endeavoring to sell tickets reading as follows:

They are building big churches priest houses, nunneries, asylums, etc. They collect money from the poor and put it into stocks and bonds so as to creste an economic advantage. They recount the names on their church books and figures seem to indicate great prosperity, but the disintegration goes on. The new time, the world's development the expansion of ideas, the unveiling of men's minds keep melting the Catholic snowball. It is inevitable. Did not the Christ say "It is best that I go away for when He, the spirit of truth, shall come He will lead you into all truth."

This saying got into the minds of the ever saw and that he was deeply impressed by his appearance. The health of Pius X, Mr. Burns says, appears to be good and he shows no trace of his recent illness. He walks firmly and his voice is strong and clear. The pope affered Mr. Burns his view when he seemed his pleasure at meeting Mr. Burns, who, he said had spent his life in aiding justice.
